WHO UNDERSTANDS
FINANCE?
AN INFECTIOUS IDEA
FARMERS WELL OFF?

By Arthur Brisbane

(Copyright 1930 By King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

GERMANY'S TROUBLE, the troubles of Austria-Hungary, and so forth, puzzle the "wise financiers". Just what it all means, they cannot tell you. The ordinary individual sees one thing plainly. Germany was beaten by the allies; Alsace-Lorraine and her colonies then arranged a pleasant program, by which they would have taken from a beaten and impoverished nation hundreds of millions in gold every year.

It sounded like planning to take ten pounds of flesh each week from a sick kitten. The plan did not work.

Just how sick the kitten is by this time nobody knows. But there is great power and ability in Germany, and the fact that the Versailles treaty compelled the Germans to discontinue gigantic expenses for a standing army and navy must have helped.

Perhaps it will all come out beautifully and smoothly in the end. One fact seems established, namely, that we are not going to get back the ten billions that we lent to Europe.

But that will not "break us", or cause any very deep grief, if Europe's nations will get on their feet, stop their hating, warring, throat-cutting and thieving, and make their governments act as decent citizens act toward each other.

The average American reads with satisfaction instructions sent by President Hoover to Secretary Stimson, who will take part in the conference of nations in London.

The secretary's instructions are to interest himself in the economic questions involved, and, by implication, he is instructed to keep out of political matters and any others, not immediately concerning Germany's present financial plight.

IT IS ALLEGED, authenticity not guaranteed, that when Calvin Coolidge was asked his opinion of the suggest moratorium in Europe, he replied: "That kind of thing is infectious."

With wheat on the farm at 25 cents a bushel, in some places, and oats at 15 cents a bushel, a moratorium has already been suggested by farmers. That would mean the right to discontinued all payments on mortgages, notes at banks, International Harvester Co. bills, etc., until further notice.

It is an "infectious" idea, but it will not be adopted here.

Alexander Legge, who used to be head of the farm board, surprises the National Livestock association with the statement that, "our farms are 'thoroughly solvent', and that 'agriculture is better off than any other American industry.'"

He says the farmers own 43 billion dollars worth of tilled land, even after deflation, and the mortgages total only nine and a half billions. Railroads, and the other big corporations are all worse off.

(By International News Service)
With a crash of thunder and lightning that took at least 13 lives, the back of the latest heat wave was broken today.

Five persons were killed by lightning in Ohio as violent wind and electric storms whipped the state, ending two days of extreme temperatures. The victims were Wade Marsh, 26, of Curtice; Daniel Rush, 56, of Holmes county; William Henry, 69, of Union county; William Fristoe, 15, and James Crawford, 13, an orphan of East Loudenville.

Western Pennsylvania had a toll of four lives taken by the sudden death of lightning. Mrs. Olie Luman, 51, and her son, Earl 33, were killed in a potato patch near Ryndman; T. D. Mark, 35, of Pittsburgh, died when his steel-shafted golf club was struck and Denis J. Petratos, 31, was killed under a tree near Blairsville.

Forty trees were whipped down by a wind in Johnson City, Tenn., and two were killed and eight injured as a crowd attending a road opening had sought shelter in the grove. Gov. Horton and other state officials had just left.

Blimp Is Damaged
The Goodyear blimp, Puritan, attending the cherry festival at Traverse City, Mich., was blown from its mooring and damaged, but the crew was uninjured as gas valves were opened for the descent of the dirigible.

DIVORCEE WINS
ACQUITTAL ON MURDER COUNT

Steubenville Woman Free
In Slaying of Patrolman Castner

COLLAPSES AND IS TAKEN FROM ROOM

Jury Returns Verdict After Three Hours' Deliberation

(By Associated Press)
STEUBENVILLE, O., July 18.—Mrs. Edna James, 27, divorcee, was freed today of first degree murder charges in connection with the death of Patrolman Raymond Castner, who was found shot in her room last April.

Courtroom Cheers

After three hours of deliberation last night the jury returned a verdict of "not guilty." As the verdict was handed down the crowded courtroom clapped its hands and cheered. Mrs. James, with tears streaming down her cheek, threw herself into the arms of her chief counsel, Hugo Chestosky, and shook hands with each juror. As she grasped the hand of the foreman, F. M. Lisle, he said: "This is your big chance, girl! Go straight from now on."

Pressed by the crowd, the woman who escaped a verdict that might have sent her to the electric chair collapsed and was carried from the room.

Says He Shot Himself

The state tried to prove that Mrs. Edna James had shot Castner when he attempted to end a love affair between them. She said the patrolman had fired at her when she refused to give him money from a joint bank account they held, and then probably shot himself when he thought he had killed her.

Despite a three-hour grilling to which she was subjected yesterday afternoon she steadfastly denied she had shot him.

COURT TO HEAR
M'GARVEY PLEA

Motion for New Trial
Before Judge W. F.
Lones Monday

Motions for a new hearing for Thomas McGarvey, recently found guilty on a manslaughter charge, will be argued before Common Pleas Judge W. Frank Lones, Lisbon, Monday morning.

McGarvey was found guilty by a jury in connection with the fatal shooting of Walter Ingledue, 28, of Lisbon, on a farm near Hanover-ton.

The shooting occurred on April 27 when McGarvey claimed he went to the Speidel farm to break up a drinking party which he said Ingledue and friends were holding there. He admitted shooting Ingledue but claimed self-defense.

The accused man faces a sentence of one to 20 years in Ohio penitentiary if the manslaughter count stands.

Doheny, will serve his long-delayed sentence of a year and a day in a penitentiary which he helped create and whose problems he studied for many years. Due to Fall's 70 years and ill health, the man who was accused of betraying his country in the leasing of naval oil reserves, probably will be confined in the newly constructed hospital ward of the New Mexico state penitentiary at Santa Fe. There he will receive expert medical attention, special food, if he so desires, and will be a free man again in four months on good behavior.

GUILFORD ROAD TO BE IMPROVED

Improving of Half of 5-
Mile Stretch On 1932 Program

According to plans of the state highway department, half of the five-mile road extending from the Lincoln highway in Center township through Guilford to New Garden in Hanover township will be improved next year. The balance of this highway will be surfaced in 1933.

The state highway department has authority under a new state law to build 50 miles of highway annually at a cost not to exceed $5,000 per mile.

Plans call for the surfacing of this road from the end of the present paved road at the county home westward to Guilford. This section will be contracted for construction during 1932.

On account of the amount of state funds available for road construction under this recent legislation, it is probable the highway will be given a macadam top, to a width of 18 feet.

Will Stock Lake

It has also been made known by the conservation division of the state department of agriculture that two or more carloads of lake fish will be dumped into the new Guilford lake this fall. After this shipment of fish has been deposited in the lake, the conservation division will then probably issue an order determining the time when lake fishing will be permitted.

Study Changes

Voters are asked by Cavanaugh to make a thorough study of changes in boundaries as announced in typewritten notices posted in all precincts of the city. Polling places for each precinct will be selected and fixed by city council at its meeting on Tuesday, August 3.

CLOSE TO SCHEDULE

The Atlantic has been crossed again from west to east, the third time this summer. Captains Alexander Magyar and George Andros, army reserve aviators, flew 3,239 miles east from Harbor Grace, Newfoundland, to land within 12 miles of Budapest, their goal. They had estimated their flight would take 26 hours; it took 222 minutes more than that. Their load of gasoline, estimated to be sufficient for 28 hours flying, was exhausted a few minutes too soon, owing to the necessity of dumping some of it.

Considering the distance and the handicaps of weather, this is a closer schedule than the best railroad in the world would attempt to keep. The percentage of error in calculations was so small as to be negligible. Not since Colonel Lindbergh's momentous flight to Paris has there been such a convincing demonstration of what human brain and body can do with the airplane.

People learn by repetition. They have been shown many times that the Atlantic can be crossed, each time strengthening their conviction that it can be crossed safely. This summer Wiley Post and Harold Gatty, Holger Høiis and Otto Hillig, and Alexander Magyar and George Andros have made the flight on schedule, coming down so close to their goals as to leave no doubt that before long trans-Atlantic flights will be news only when they fail—not when they succeed. Public confidence in aviation is growing more rapidly than it did in either railroad or steamship transportation.

PITY THE POOR SAILOR!

Ordinary acceptance of sailors by Akron residents is requested by the Beacon Journal of that city. It seems that enlisted men in uniform visiting Akron in connection with the navy's preparations to take over its new dirigible, nearing completion, have been snubbed abruptly and frequently.

A particularly pathetic tale is related by a sailor waiting for a street car and hearing a lady instructing her personable daughter not to look at "that scum," meaning himself. Sailors who will be spending considerable time in Akron the next few months would like to "feel" a more hospitable atmosphere in the rubber city. And they should, by all means.

The life of a sailor in an inland city in peace time, however, is bound to have its ups and downs. In the first place his uniform attracts attention. It is strange, almost outlandish to eyes unaccustomed to seeing it. In the second place, generations of fighting, energetic sailormen have schooled the public in the belief that the two-fisted men in stovepipe pants and sailor hats always are rough and ready. In a city of Akron's refinement and inland position, therefore, it is to be expected that sailors, even though they be hand-picked sailors assigned to the new navy dirigible, will experience certain difficulties getting past front doors in the resident districts.

The Beacon Journal hopes Akron will not send them away "with the idea that this is an unfriendly city for respectable sailors." There's your cue, sailors. Be respectable and you'll get along all right in Akron.

What Others Say

THE MONUMENT BEACON

With a fund of $15,000 available for the lighting of the Washington monument to make the shaft visible to night-flying aviators, the Director of Public Buildings and Public Parks is proceeding with plans for this work. Two great searchlights are to be obtained at once, to be placed as to illuminate the four sides of the 55-foot tip. Meanwhile a study is being made of the proper method of illuminating the shaft itself—the great five-hundred-foot stretch of masonry. This is not as simple a matter as would seem at first thought. Batteries of lights must be so placed as to sweep the monument evenly from bottom to top. They must be at sufficient distance from the shaft to place it within the range on full power of illumination. The equipment can not be moved back and forth, for it is heavy and, furthermore, must be served with current from established lines. It is undesirable to have the apparatus housed in unsightly structures, and now an effort is being made to design "containers" that can be used as rest benches during the day.

When night flying began in this vicinity the Washington monument was the terror of pilots. The comparatively feeble light thrown up on the upper part of the shaft from one of the hotels did not make it sufficiently visible to be surely avoided. Red lights were recently placed in the windows at the tip, but these, while visible at close range, were not surely identifiable from the heights at which planes were usually flown toward the city. While the experienced pilot knows his landmarks thoroughly, a fixed red light is not an assured guide.

It is confidently expected that there will be a great increase in night flying between Washington and other cities. Already the city service makes the "lane" between Washington and Newark, for example, quite the busiest in the world. There must be no high dangers near this airport, and the illumination of the Washington monument—which incidentally will make the shaft a glory by night as by day—will eliminate the most serious peril to flying in darkness.—Washington Star.

Mexico City—Five thousand persons are dying in the states of Guanajuato today according to a petition for aid just received. The famine is the result of floods in which most of the food was destroyed.

While Salemites were blistering in the hot sun during the past few weeks, Jacob Schumaker, of this city, was experiencing great difficulty in keeping from freezing. But Mr. Schumaker was thousands of miles away, visiting his old home in Switzerland. He has just returned from a three months' trip.

ROUEN, July 18.—Outside of Paris, Rouen is to my notion the most delightful city in France. We decided to remain over for the afternoon and evening and motor into Paris in the morning. Here of course, Joan of Arc met her flaming fate and her spirit of sacrifice seems to dominate the citizenry.

Everywhere there is a gentle humility and kindness. Naturally the fascinating object of the town is the famous cathedral yet to the unartistic eye it appears a patchwork, mingling as it does the architectural styles from the 12th to the 14th century.

This gives it the jumble of mutilation—the saw-toothed effect of a New York skyline. Yet as the living voice of the periods they represent one stands in awe. Our guide was one of those conscientious liars, as European guides usually are, and we quickly dismissed him to prow on our own.

We struck out from the square surrounding the cathedral through the dark Rue de l'Epicerie—the Street of Groceries—smelly, cluttered and with a sidewalk only for single file travel. But at its other end there burst a dazzling flower market, ringing with the cry of vendors.

A little further on we ran into the entrance of what is perhaps the most gruesome of all the world cemeteries. It was founded during the black plague in the 18th century. And over the gateway are carved leaping skeletons dragging away victims. My wife went into it. I didn't. I'm not the "teep."

In a bleak little street nearby we came upon a tiny cafe with only two sidewalk tables. We sat down at one and from the dark bottled interior there waddled the fattest woman I've ever seen outside of a circus. She was such a monstrosity that Billy began barking.

And that brought out three large and fiercely shaggy mongrels that circled about menacingly with bared teeth. I tucked my dog under my arm, placed two francs on the table top and backed away down the narrow street. From every upstairs window protruded a smiling face.

After lunch—at which, incidentally, we ran into that beaming and insufferable nit-wit of shipboard who met me daily with hands rubbing to inquire: "Well, what may we expect from your pen tomorrow?"—we visited what is left of the Chateau de Rouen, built in 1205 by Phillips-Auguste. Here Joan of Arc with the torture instruments spread before her brave gaze, was questioned.

From there we walked to the Old Market Place and saw the exact spot where the heroine was burned to death. The tablet is set in the pavement and bears the date, May 30, 1431. To me Joan of Arc is by far the most courageous figure in old world history and I confess to a shudder standing on the identical ground where 500 years ago her spirit soared upward on wings of fire. Great monuments seem a tawdry expiation for such a bestial crime against one who had not only made a nation but gave the ruling king his crown.

We decided to put up for the night at one of those out of the way family-run pensions. It was magnificently named for Richard Coeur de Lion, whose ruined estate is in the Rouen environs. The entrance was through a garage like doorway into a stone-paved court. A pull at the concierge bell brought a shy but sternly lovely black haired girl. She seemed completely abashed in the presence of foreigners and ran for her mother—an ample bodomed and smiling creature who showed us to a pleasant room leading off an outside stair. Rouen, despite its commercial activities, is still primitive. A coal oil lamp was the sole illumination. The bed was comfortable but the entire effect was cheerless. I gave my wife a knowing look, we made our excuses and departed for the leading hotel of the town. Our change of heart was received so graciously and so understandingly that from a corner market we sent the proprietress a bouquet.

Dinner tonight was under a python limbed oak in a hotel court. The branches were strung with electric lights which seemed to reflect spirit of the mercurial diners underneath. The evening was surcharged with a fragrance, the chicken was excellent, a three-piece orchestra played "Valencia" and the chattering birds in the trees were especially well mannered. Some time I want to spend an entire holiday here. Thus bringing another old ruin to Rouen.

The Stars Say—

For Sunday, July 19

Sunday's horoscope holds fortuitous augurs for affairs of church, ecclesiastical pursuits and persons and for labor, industry and employment generally. Rewards for diligence and steadfastness may be expected. But contentions and passionate indulgences should be avoided and writings carefully handled.

Those whose birthday it is may expect a year of substantial recognition for their fidelity, persistency and industry. There may be promotion and preferment with growth of real possessions. Quarrels, impetuosity and indulgences should be shunned. A child born on this day should be patient, hard working and practical, but may be disposed to be quick tempered and passionate in its conduct and speech. With these under restraint it should make a success in business and employment, attaining solid place in life with real possessions.

Notable nativity: Dr. C. H. Mayo, surgeon.

For Monday, July 20

Monday's astrological forecast is a favorable one for new undertakings and for dealings with those in places of prominence and power. These may be approached for support of unusual projects or in secret arrangements calling for diplomacy and tact. There may be some beneficial intrigue, but sign papers carefully.

Those whose birthday it is may look for a year of advantageous relations with those of power and importance, especially in regard to new ventures of a secret or diplomatic complexion. Conspiracy and subterfuge may be gainful, but be careful in the signing of writings. A child born on this day may be disposed to attain its aims and ambitions by methods of subtlety, diplomacy and intrigue. It may reach fortunate estate through these measures.

Notable nativity: Santos Dumont, aviator.

HEALTH

Kidney Disturbances

A common and often neglected disease of the kidney is that condition known as "hydronephrosis."

Hydronephrosis, as the name implies, is an enlargement of the kidney, due to obstruction and the retention of fluid. It is brought about by a disturbance in the mechanics of the kidney.

A kidney stone, a twist in the drainage tube, or an obstruction in any portion of the tract leading from the kidney to the bladder, holds back the urine. Because the urine cannot pass on into the bladder, it is forced upwards into the kidney. When the accumulation is great it produces pressure, of course, and this may cause necrosis, or death of the kidney tissue.

The kidney gradually enlarges. More and more urine collects in the kidney because it has no avenue of escape. In spite of this it is surprising how slight is the pain in this condition. When pain does occur, it is severe while it lasts, but quickly subsides.

This trouble is often neglected.

SECRET PLACES

By Joan Sutherland

Synopsis of Preceding Installments:

Until Feodor Staire, 36-year-old attaché of the British Embassy in Paris, met Toni Wareham, daughter of Lady Alice Wareham, he had been bored by the modern, hard-boiled young girl. They became engaged after a whirlwind courtship. He was to be married in October and the Warehams had gone to Le Touquet for the summer. Staire's old friend, Ronald Halkes, had married Toni's beautiful sister about a year before. Ronald's newspaper work kept him early and late, and she was much in the company of the Comte Henri D'Arblaye, a wealthy South American, who claimed to be a Frenchman. He gave her a costly emerald, paid gambling debts of 80,000 francs, and lent the extravagant Greta money to meet other pressing needs. When Toni returned, and said she would be able to help her financially after she became Feodor's wife, Greta, angry at first, pretended to accept her advice. When they returned to Paris, Ronald was unable to accompany Greta to the Hal Masque, and when Toni learned that Greta was staying on after two in the morning she decided to go to her home. Instead, she left with D'Arblaye, and Staire followed in a taxi. D'Arblaye dismissed his taxi in front of his apartment just before a storm broke. Feodor waited, and despite the thunder heard a pistol shot. Soon Greta appeared, panic-stricken.

INSTALLMENT XVII

"Quick—quick—get me away!" Greta was panting and trembling, yet she did not raise her voice above the merest whisper. "Quick—hide me in the room!"

"She nudged Feodor forward, clutching the cloak once more around her, and he had to follow though the rain beat blindingly upon them, and as they left the doorway a few yards behind them she caught again at his coat.

"I shot him!" she whispered and her voice froze his blood—"I shot him!"

Grasping her by the arm Staire guided her round the corner into a side street, not knowing whether or no she spoke the truth, but acting as he had had to act before with no time for reasoned thought. "You must walk—quickly. When we have gotten away from this neighborhood we'll take a taxi." His voice was sharp and low, he hurried her mercilessly, and about them the storm raged and glittered and as they hurried—Greta stumbling even though she clung to him. His brain began to work quietly and clearly. It was no good to ask her questions for the moment. All her strength and breath were necessary for the pace at which they walked, but when somewhere in the vicinity of the Champs Elysees—well on the other side of the Champs Elysees—they picked up a belated taxi, he was peremptory.

"What has happened?"

She was huddled in the corner of the taxi, drenched through, her damp gold hair plastered against her face; and even now, soaked with the rain, disheveled, terrified, she was pitifully, appealingly lovely, and seeing how she was shivering, he spoke more gently.

"You must tell me—please."

She nodded, gallantly controlling her nerves.

"I agreed to go in—just for a drink—and then he was to take me home. I was angry when he dismissed the taxi, but I knew we could pick one up in the Champs Elysees. I stood arguing with him, then finally consented to go in for a few moments. I never thought of a storm. While I was drinking the wine he showed me some of his curiosities. He is a collector of a shudder-wrenching kind—a connoisseur of old bronzes, a collector of old bronzes and ancient carvings. In a drawer with them was a revolver. I remarked that that was a queer curio, and he laughed and said he always kept it loaded for fear of thieves, because many of his things—especially the Egyptian relics—were valuable. I... when I wanted to go. Again she shivered, and in spite of himself Feodor began shivering her ice-cold hands. "He..."

undressed an hour or so before his man usually called him and got into bed; but he could not sleep, and rose shortly before 8 o'clock and had coffee and rolls. Then he lit a pipe and began walking up and down the long pleasant room trying to arrange his thoughts. There was no possible chance for him to escape question; of that he could be certain. Directly D'Arblaye's body was found, the concierge would be informed, and the concierge would notify the police of Staire's departure in the early hours.

There was also the certainty that Greta would be questioned closely by the police too, since there was ample evidence that she left the opera in D'Arblaye's company. The first thing to do was to get into communication with her and give her some line. At 9 o'clock her voice came over the wire.

"Is that you, Feodor? Can I see you?"

"Not yet. Do you ever go out early in the morning?"

"Hardly ever. Why?"

"You must not depart from your usual habits—listen to me carefully. If you are interviewed by the police, as you will be, or asked questions—you understand?—you are to say that you left your companion without entering his apartment. That you stood arguing on the pavement till I arrived. Say I brought you home, but—remember this: we had to walk a little way through the rain to get a taxi. We were nearly wet through and you were very cross; then you suddenly remembered that you had given your bag to D'Arblaye to carry and that he had slipped it in his pocket. I offered to get it for you. Have you got that? Not one other word. You know nothing more, you understand, except what you have seen in the papers. I may call this afternoon about 5 o'clock to inquire how you are after your drowning. And above all don't get into a panic. Everything depends upon your doing exactly as I say, whatever you may hear."

She promised, but Feodor had little faith in her ability to keep her word, in which he did her an injustice, for Greta had plenty of strength where her own comfort or safety was concerned—as the morning was to prove.

Morning prayer and sermon 11. A thought for the week:

The prophets have taught that men would be judged, and in the parable of the sheep and the goats our Lord maintains the principle that the quality of our life in this world will determine our future. There are those who regard their three-score years and ten as so much capital, which they can spend in any way they please. When it is gone, that is the end of it. But if we believe in a future life, then the spending of our capital is not the end of it. For the use we make of it moulds our characters. And what we are determines our ability to enter into the life that God would give us. To believe in the reality of the principle of judgment is to become aware of the responsibilities of our present existence. I do not think the parable's vivid phrases, 'the kingdom prepared from the beginning of the world,' and 'eternal fire,' were intended to tell us anything specific about the life to come. They stand for joy and sorrow.

HOLY TRINITY LUTHERAN

East State st. at Woodland ave., Rev. George D. Keister, pastor.

Seventh Sunday after Trinity; Sunday school 9:45 (2 Corinthians 9:1-7), H. E. Smith, Supt.

"Christianity is the mother of love and consideration for all brethren. From the beginning there was that spirit of helpfulness to the needy and unfortunate that set the new faith in Christ upon an entirely different plane. The passing of the centuries has increased the power and organization of the church in the duties of doing good into all mankind. Charity and social service can find no other source than from the teachings of Christ. One of the joys of true living is the fact that we can live and work for the good of others. Selfishness and individual emphasis has no place in the program of Christ. A true Christian cannot be self-centered and follow Jesus."

Morning worship 11, sermon: "Enough Evidence."

"Evidence is proof that something exists or that something has happened. When sufficient evidence has been produced, the last bit of doubt and question should be thrown away. The evidence and proof of Christ and His work is that which has not been equalled in all time. The doubts of questioner of first century were all removed if the doubter was willing to be convinced. The unwillingness of some to accept the way of life through Jesus Christ is proof that they are not convinced when sufficient evidence is produced. There is enough evidence in favor of Christ and His Church if only the mind and heart are willing to accept."

Evening worship, 7:30. This is a union service of Salem churches. The sermon will be preached by Rev. C. F. Bailey, pastor of the Friends church. His sermon topic is "Keeping the Faith." Holy Trinity choir will sing.

COME TO CHURCH SUNDAY

Who's Your Tailor?

Who's your tailor?

That's not an unusual question from one man of the world to another.

There's something about the smooth suavity of the well-dressed man that prompts all others to emulate him. That well-groomed look radiates success. And success begets yet more success.

But did you ever hear one man ask another, "Who prescribes your moral code."

That is never necessary. The man who lives within those statutes of moral decency which are written by the churches has the fact written on his face.

To the employer, to the executive, even to his fellow workers, the man who has ingrained into his character the principles of right-living, good conduct, and high moral integrity has his reputation engraved where all may read.

In the church tomorrow, the ministers of this city will sound the call of good citizenship. They sound it every Sunday. They will offer moral guidance as they do each week. They are the spokesmen for that mightiest institutional force in American life—the church.

Those who support the church and accept its leadership in the cause of better citizenship gain from their contact the priceless moral and financial asset of its stabilizing influence.

THE HOME KITCHEN

By Jeannette Young Norton

Cooking Fresh Legumes

For only a brief part of the year can we catch the full, fresh flavor of peas and beans. And it's rather an elusive flavor, too, easily dissipated in careless cooking. But if the right kind are purchased, properly prepared, they have a rare and delightful flavor comparable only to prime green corn.

Watch of ridges in buying string beans or green peas. While the pods should be firm, large and bright green in color, if there are ridges on the pods, it's a sign of overmaturity. The peas will be edible, but they won't have the fine, fresh flavor. String beans should be straight, brightly colored, and snap at a slight touch.

Do not shell peas until the last moment. First put on water to boil. In the meantime shell peas. Place in boiling water and turn down the light so that peas simmer, not boil. About 20 to 30 minutes should be sufficient to cook peas to tenderness. Place the drained peas in a hot bowl, add a lump of butter, some salt and pepper and serve at once.

The custom of adding sugar to peas to sweeten them (or worse, soda to intensify their green color) is a kind of adulteration. If the peas are good quality, it will spoil instead of help the flavor.

Preparing the Beans

In preparing string beans, either the green or yellow wax variety, first wash in cold water, then cut off both ends and what string there is, and the better the beans the less the string. Put in boiling water and cook until tender, which may be anywhere from 20 to 40 minutes. Beans will cook more quickly if they are salted longwise in long strips—what is known in restaurants as "French beans." Some think the beans taste more delicate prepared in this way.

The simplest way to serve string beans is like peas—a lump of butter, salt and pepper to taste. Or, add a tablespoonful of thick, sweet cream as well.

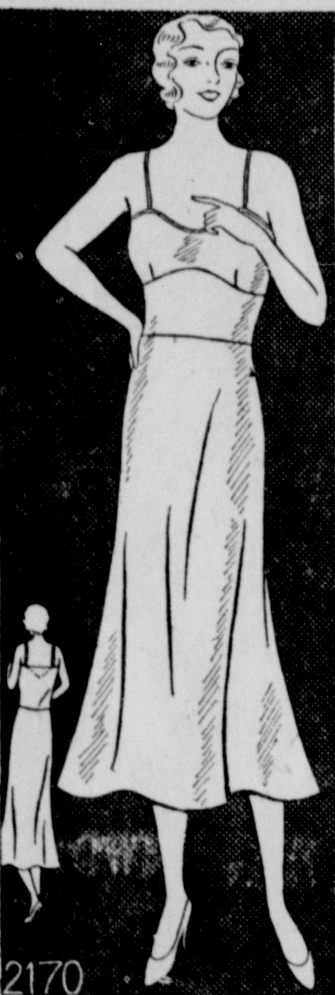

If the string beans are not at their best, then they can be prepared with other vegetables to give them flavor.

Spiced String Beans

1 pound string beans
1 onion
1/2 tablespoon lemon juice
2 tablespoons butter
1 teaspoon sugar
1/4 teaspoon ginger
1/4 teaspoon pepper
1/2 teaspoon salt
Dash of nutmeg

Cook beans until tender. Melt the butter, add the chopped onion and cook until light brown. Add other seasoning, blend well, then add the cooked, drained string beans and heat together.

If desired, a whole tomato can be cooked with the string beans to give additional flavor. And there is a rather unusual dish which calls for the addition of a half cupful of raisins to the spiced string beans—in which case the sugar can be omitted.

String beans can be cooked with some of the other green vegetables. A good combination is string beans with sweet peppers. Or string beans with okra and tomatoes, or green squash and tomatoes.

Plain cooked string beans can be given a variety of flavorings like chopped chives, or bay leaf or thyme, or a combination of ginger and lemon juice and melted butter.

Ferrell Pitches And Bats Indians To 2-1 Win Over Yankees

THE DAY In Sports

WALKER BATTLES SHARKEY HOW ABOUT SCHEMLING? MACKS STILL THE BEST

NEXT WEDNESDAY night at Ebbets field, Brooklyn, Mickey Walker, Jack Kearns' protégé and former world middleweight champion, battles Boston's loquacious Gob, Jack Sharkey, in a fight of more than ordinary importance to the pugilists even if no one else is concerned in the fracas. The principals are struggling for survival in the race for existence in American heavyweight fight circles.

Perhaps the New York Boxing Commission has no reason for its claim that the winner of this Walker-Sharkey clash will be recognized in the state of gigantic fight purses as the world champion, but that will be done nevertheless. You say "how about Herr Max Schmeling?" Well, the Gothamites ignore the Deutschman completely and as far as they are concerned, Adolph might just as well not fought young W. L. Stripling at Cleveland July 3.

Sharkey and Walker have every reason to take their coming battle seriously. What with a number of youngsters threatening to take the places of old-timers such as they are now getting to be, they must display some talents more worthy of fandom's attention than the ordinary pugilist or even Stanley Poreda, Charlie Retzlaff, Tommy Loughran and other deserving batters will be holding a monopoly on the flaccid spotlight.

New York will have a hard time impressing fans that they should attend the Sharkey-Walker battle and the principals themselves will find difficulty in claiming the heavy title following the affair. It seems Schmeling is the recognized champ despite his "eye injury" and his immediate return to the Fatherland after annihilating the Pride of Georgia.

Take either Walker or Sharkey and you'll find a batter, should he be the world's champion, that would do plenty of fighting while he is in possession of the crown. Take Loughran and you have the same type of active champion; take Schmeling, well, the Fatherland calls him too often even though he did give Stripling the worst trouncing of his career and put up a really impressive battle in doing that.

Another thing assured, the fight at Ebbets field will be ever so much more interesting than the fracas at Cleveland. Walker needs the money, needs the prestige and wants a championship badly. Sharkey is fighting for redemption, wants to show fans he doesn't have to strike low to win, and, if he starts fighting like he did against Jack Dempsey three years ago, the Toy Bulldog will have the toughest time of his career in evading a knockout. For, if you remember, the Talkative Tar gave William Harrison all he could take for six rounds, then fell asleep and left the Manassa Mauler paste him on the jaw with a sleeper that sent him into incoherent solitude for 15 minutes.

WAITE HOYT's performance with Cornelius McGillicuddy's Athletics will prove a big factor in the Mackmen's race for a third straight American league championship. The former Yankee star will give Mack's other stars, Walberg, Grove and Earnshaw, a chance for resting—even if all three claim they don't want the chance—and besides, Hoyt will win his share of games.

Regardless of the number of star hurlers Mack may have, Grove and Earnshaw still want to work every chance they get. They are real hurlers, the two best the league has, Wesley Ferrell and a few others notwithstanding, and there isn't another team in the circuit that even looks as if it had a chance of nosing them out.

NEWBURYPORT, R. I. — Her husband kept her shoes in a pail of water, so she couldn't go out at night, Mrs. John Earl complained in court here. The husband was convicted of assault, but the case was filed.

NEW YORK HELD TO THREE HITS BY TRIBE STAR

Cleveland Ace Hits Home Run In Seventh To Win Own Game

GROVE REGISTERS 19th WIN OF YEAR

Mackmen Trim Tigers, 6-3, Annex Four Out of Five In Series

WESLEY FERRELL pitched and batted the Cleveland Indians to a thrilling 2-1 victory over Joe McCarthy's New York Yankees in their home stadium Friday.

Ruth Hits Homer

Ferrell allowed Ruth and Co. only three hits, one of them a circuit-clout by the Bambino—his 23rd this year—and won his own game with a homer into the left field bleachers in the seventh.

Willie Kamm, Averill and Seeds shared batting honors with Ferrell, getting seven of their team's 10 safe blows. Kamm connected safely three times.

No one has accused either the Boston Braves or the Cincinnati Reds of having designs on this year's National league pennant, but those two clubs have just completed what likely will stand as the most remarkable series played in either major league this season.

For pitching brilliance over a period of days, there has been nothing so far to compare with the performances given by their respective mound staffs the last four days. Total runs scored by both teams in the four contests was 13, eight for the Reds and five for the Braves. Shutouts were registered on three of the four afternoons, John Ogden and Red Lucas turning the feat for the Reds and Bruce Cunningham for the Braves.

Reds Win Two

Cincinnati's two victories were won by scores of 1 to 0, and 5 to 0. Boston captured its pair, 3 to 2, and 2 to 0. Lefty Brandt, of the Braves, allowed only four hits in losing the second game of the series to old John Ogden.

In climaxed the torrid series yesterday, Lucas limited the Braves to five hits, two of them by Rabbit Maranville, while he and his mates jumped on Frankhouse and Moe for 10 to run up the highest score of the series. Lucas, himself, contributed a double and a single to the attack.

While on the subject of pitching, Jumbo Jim Elliott of the Phillies, comes in for a share of the plaudits. His team could win only two out of five engagements from the Pittsburgh Pirates, and he pitched both of them. After beating the Pirates, 1 to 0, on Monday, he came back to do it again yesterday, 4 to 1, for his 13th victory of the year. He yielded only four hits and did not walk a batter.

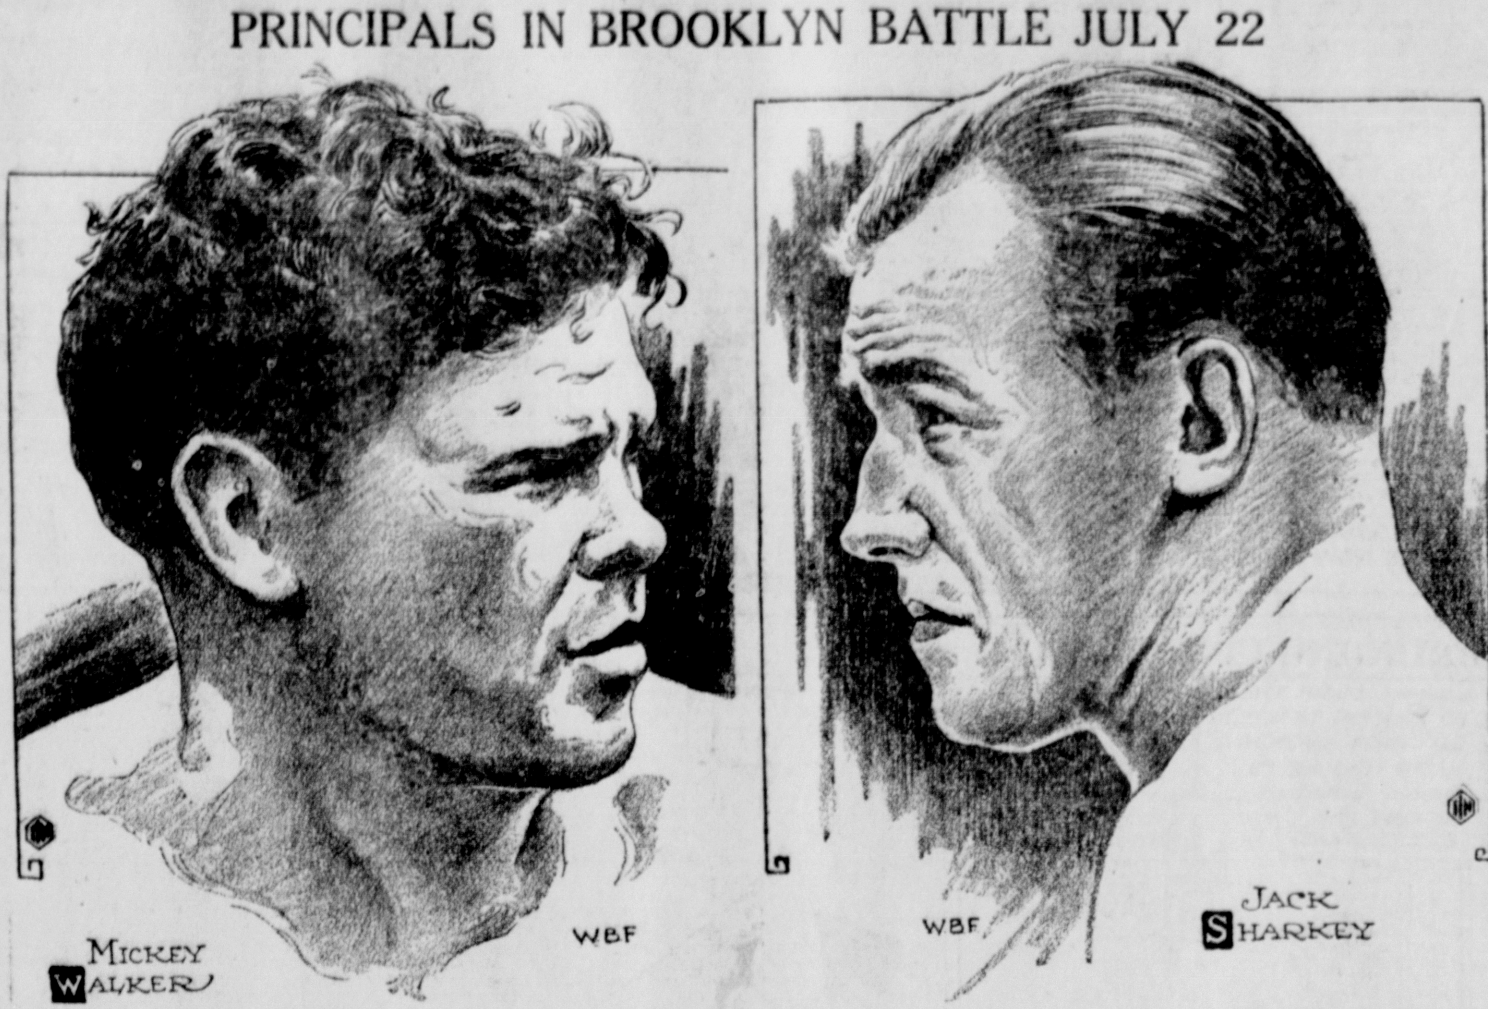

Old Timers Star

A pair of Brooklyn ancients, Adolfo Luque and John Quinn, held the St. Louis Cardinals to nine scattered blows as the Robins squared the four-game series, 4 to 1.

Batting, rather than pitching, featured the fourth game in the senior circuit, the Giants clouting three Chicago curvers for 15 hits to close the series with a 7 to 6 victory and squeeze back into second place in the standing. Ethan Allen, a pinch hitter, drove across the winning runs with a double after two were out in the seventh.

Lefty Grove chalked up his 19th victory of the year and his tenth in a row as the champion Athletics made it four out of five from Detroit, 6 to 3.

Every member of the Washington club connected at least once as the Senators batted the Chicago White Sox a 12 to 7 farewell.

Mickey Walker, former middleweight champion of the world, now one of the country's leading heavyweights, battles Jack Sharkey, Boston's talkative tar, at Ebbets field, Brooklyn, next Wednesday, July 22. The winner of the fight will be recognized by the New York Boxing commission as the world's heavyweight champion while Max Schmeling, who won said title when he was fouled by Sharkey last year, will be ignored unless he meets that winner.

Morgan Passes Ruth In Race For League Batting Laurels

(By Associated Press)

CHICAGO, July 18.—Eddie Morgan, of Cleveland, a holdout who made good the same season, again has replaced Babe Ruth as the leader in the American league batting championship race.

Unofficial averages, including games of Thursday, showed that while the Bambino's mark fell from .391 to .376, Morgan climbed into the lead with his .381 record. It was the first time in three weeks that Ruth was shoved out of the lead and it was Morgan who accomplished the trick the last time.

Lou Gehrig, another first baseman of note with the New York Yankees, stood out as the individual batting leader of the three, however. He led in four specialties with 67 runs, a total base collection of 227, a leading total of 26 home runs and in runs batted in with 91. His batting mark was .354. The leading hit producer was Al Simmons of the Athletics with 127.

Earl Webb, of Boston, topped the field with 39 doubles. Simmons and west of Washington were tied with 11 triples apiece, while Chapman, of the Yankees, was far ahead in base stealing with 34 thefts.

All of the leaders, except Chapman, were among the Big Ten hitters in the league, the unofficial averages disclosed. The leaders: Morgan, Cleveland, .381; Ruth, New York, .376; D. Harris, Washington, .364; Simmons Philadelphia, .362; Goslin, St. Louis, .361; Gehrig, New York, .354; West, Washington, .354; Webb Boston, .352; Averill, Cleveland, .348; and Cochran, Philadelphia, .343.

Starting a belated drive to regain the National league batting supremacy he held last season, Bill Terry, slugging first baseman of the New York Giants, pounded out 12 hits in 27 times at bat during the past week to climb from fifth to third place among the regulars and within 11 points of the leader.

Terry's .444 week boosted his average to .348, compared to the .369 mark of Chuck Klein, of the Phillies, and the .356 average of Virgil Davis, big Phillie catcher. Other leaders through Thursday's game were: Hendrick, Cincinnati, .345; Hogan, New York, .345; Grimm, Chicago, .343; Cuyler, Chicago, .341; Hornsby, Chicago, .337; Allen, New York, .333; Roettger, St. Louis, .331; and Arlett, Philadelphia, .327.

WAYNESBURG, Pa.—The heat was so intense here recently that a flock of birds nearly drove bathers from Ten Mile Creek. Flocks of birds from nearby fields came swooping down on the stream. They hovered near the bank all day.

AVERAGES SOAR AS TEAMSTAKE EASY CONTESTS

Hardware, Pottery Victor In One-Sided League Games Friday

Individual and team batting averages benefited as Salem Hardware and Salem China company mullish outfits won easy, one-sided contests in city league competition at Centennial park field Friday.

The Pottery scored in everyone of seven innings, smacked out 19 hits, which, coupled with 16 errors, gave the team an 18-6 verdict over the Harrod Cox Studios. The Hardware tallied seven runs in the seventh to clinch a loosely played tilt and won a 10-2 verdict.

Cox Studios broke all previous league records for error making with their 16 misplays.

OKLAHOMA CITY—The nocturnal prowling habit of Rusty, Persian tomcat, has cost two interested parties upwards of $20. E. B. Moore appealed a court decision granting Mrs. A. N. Foster, who adopted the cat when she found it on the street, a $5 judgment for two months' board bill. A district court judge ruled that Moore was the rightful owner and was not responsible for Rusty's meanderings and assessed the court costs equally between Moore and Mrs. Foster, $14.85 each.

LITTLE TRADING ON N. Y. MARKET

Stocks Inactive As Leading Issues Await News From Germany

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK, July 18.—Stocks stagnated in meaningless trading today as the market awaited developments at the important Franco-German conference.

The tone was slightly heavy, especially during the first hour, but turnover was down to merely nominal proportions. U. S. Steel, after sagging a point, cancelled its loss. American Telephone, which had been up 2 1/4, fell back to the previous close.

Moderate declines in American Can, Westinghouse and a few other active issues were mostly retrieved. General Electric, Sears, Roebuck, Standard Gas, Allied Chemical and Eastman Kodak were rather heavy. Ralls did little, although quotations on such tractions as appeared showed numerous narrow declines.

Sales for the two hours approximated 300,000 shares.

Talking Picture Features At Salem's Playhouses

Clark Gable and Norma Shearer in "A Free Soul"; Warner Oland in "The Black Camel"; and Charles Ruggles in "The Girl Habit."

These three pictures feature the program of talking picture attractions, billed for appearance at the State and Grand theaters next week. Three other high class productions are also scheduled.

Tonight's Features

Completing two-day runs here tonight are "Forbidden Adventure" at the Grand and "I Take This Woman," at the State. The former is rated as one of the best dramas of the month and stars Mitzi Green, Louise Fazenda, Jackie Searl and Edna May Oliver.

Charles Ruggles, playing in his first starring picture for Paramount, climbs to stardom in "The Girl Habit" in which he is supported by a strong cast which includes Sue Conroy, Margaret Dumont and Allen Jenkins. The picture is scheduled Wednesday and Thursday at the Grand.

Oland, again shown as the famous detective of Earl Derr Biggers fiction—Biggers is a former Warren, O. resident—plays opposite Sally Eilers with Bela Lugosi of "Dracula" fame also in the cast. Oland is Charlie Chan, the Chinese detective, brought face to face with one of the greatest mysteries of his career, the murder of Shelah Fane, movie actress, in Honolulu. It appears at the Grand Friday and Saturday.

Miss Shearer Starred

Rated as her greatest drama is "A Free Soul" in which Miss Shearer and Gable appear at the State Monday and Tuesday. Lionel Barrymore, a decade ago one of the silent film's greatest stars, is also in the cast. It concerns the attempt of a father to rear his girl in ultra-modern fashion with a fanatical determination to impress her that she is free to do with herself as she likes.

Three other entirely new talking dramas, "Confessions of a Coed,"
